VICTORIA GOLD: CANADIAN MINING JOURNAL TOP 40

The Canadian Mining Journal (CMJ), Canada's most-read mining magazine, recently recognized Victoria Gold within its annual Canada's Top 40 ranking of the country's top producing mining companies for 2021.

According to the CMJ, "although businesses were still trying to adjust to the global COVID-19 pandemic, the mining sector continued to handle the pandemic effectively in 2021. Also, the good news is that mining employment has increased since June 2020. In May 2021, employment was up almost nine per cent year-over-year."

The majority of the CMJ Canada's Top 40 list are primary gold producers, including new additions to this prestigious category such as Victoria Gold which moved up into the rankings from runner-up status last year.

"The Victoria Gold team is very pleased to be included in the Canadian Mining Journal's Canada's Top 40 ranking," says Victoria Gold President & CEO John McConnell. "We greatly appreciate the support we receive from Yukoners throughout the territory and I extend my sincere thanks to our amazing employees, contractors and partners for their hard work and commitment to excellence at the Eagle Gold Mine as we work together for the benefit of the Yukon."

To be eligible for CMJ's Top 40 Canadian miners list, companies must be: domiciled in Canada; trade on the Canadian stock exchange; and, have a significant share of an operating mine or advanced development in Canada.
