VICTORIA GOLD CONGRATULATES YUKONER ANNE LEWIS ON NATIONAL AWARD

On behalf of the entire Victoria Gold team, throughout our operations, we extend our sincere congratulations to Anne Lewis, founder and President of Yukon Women in Mining (YukonWIM) upon receiving the prestigious Women in Mining Canada 2022 Trailblazer Award.

Anne, who is also the Executive Director of the Yukon Mining Alliance (YMA), received this national award for her diligent commitment to equity, diversity and inclusion (EDI) within the Yukon's, and the country's, mineral exploration and development sector.

Established in 2012, Women in Mining Trailblazer Awards recognize women who 'embody the trailblazing spirit, which refers to the leadership mindset needed to make extraordinary personal strides to navigate the Canada mining industry.'

A born and raised Yukoner, Anne has 15 years' experience in the mining industry on the local, national and international stage.

As Executive Director of the YMA, she collaboratively developed the globally-recognized Invest Yukon brand to connect investors with the territory's competitive advantages through innovative capital attraction initiatives. She is also the President of Whitehorse-based CSR Management, in addition to her founding/ leadership role in YukonWIM, is co-founder of the Arctic Indigenous Investment Conference and most recently, on International Women's Day this year, launched WE.ArcticImpact with co-founder Lynn Hutton – a new initiative to support inclusive and diverse economies which enhance the economic empowerment of women and girls throughout the Arctic.

Anne was also instrumental in Kate Carmacks' 2019 induction into the Canadian Mining Hall of Fame.

Anne is the second Yukoner to receive this award in its 10-year existence. In 2017, geologist and YukonWIM Champion Sue Craig garnered the recognition.

Sincerely,

John McConnell
